“YOU’RE NOT ALONE”

Chances are, when most people think of the Washington County Jail, a positive experience probably isn’t top of mind. But thanks to two social workers operating there largely behind the scenes since April 2021, some jail inmates may leave with better access to resources than when they arrived.

Kesha Marson and Meg Mickulski, who are part of Washington County Community Services posted in the jail, helped launch the jail’s embedded social services program that is aimed to help people in acute crisis during initial intake, as well as with ongoing mental health support during the average stay of 7 to 10 days. Both social workers visit with 8 to 10 people a day, make sure inmates’ families and case workers know they are there, ensure access to required medications, and help correctional staff de-escalate situations. Marson and Mickulski also provide referrals for transportation, housing, job searches, substance abuse treatment, as well as medical and mental health care in hopes of moving forward once people are released.

The team’s main message: “You’re not here alone.”

On July 7 at about 8:30am, a deputy spoke with a caller reporting disturbing behavior from the night of July 4th. The caller said that between 11:30pm and midnight, someone was pounding on the windows and doors of the caller's home and that of another nearby resident. The caller reviewed video from the entrance to the residential development and provided two suspect plates. The deputy was able to identify both vehicles and subsequently contacted the family of a couple of the youths present at the time. The deputy had a conference call about being respectful of other people's property, making good decisions, and consequences of failing those two things. Discipline will be handled at home by the parents, and no further need for law enforcement was needed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SHERIFF

Last month marked my 31st anniversary of service at the Washington County Sheriff's Office. Through the years, I've been privileged to serve many roles here: patrol, K9 and investigations, moving from deputy to sergeant, commander, chief deputy and, finally, sheriff. My entire career has been with Washington County, and I've done my best to support our many deputies, correctional officers, and public safety telecommunicators.

In 2024 alone, we've been fortunate to hire 11 additional deputies, 9 correctional officers and 2 telecommunicators, and these public servants will be our leaders in the future. Our most recent swearing-in ceremony, which I consider among the most meaningful events we observe, was on July 6.

I'm proud of all the people who make up WCSO and I know that they are all guided each day by the motto I have followed throughout my time here: "Do the right thing even when no one is watching."

In service,

Sheriff Dan Starry
